How fresh these leaves look!

The mulberry tree had become sick and straggly, its branches stretching out 5 or 6 metres out from the trunk.

When we arranged to remove the cocos palm at the front fence, we also got the mulberry tree pruned back to the old two-metre trunk plus another two-metre vertical allowance. All the spreading branches were pruned back.

We were left with a four-metre high bare tower but this has quickly sprouted these new, healthy leaves.
